IN MY SHOES

“Walk a mile in my shoes is to celebrate the Accra market scene where the street is full of different settings and movements because Accra as the Capital city of Ghana comprises of different ethnic religions and culture. The perspective of this project was to use images to preach about the economy and culture of the people in Ghana. Streets full of different “hustle”, carrying of goods in pans on the head, baskets and others carrying on shoulders to sell to make a living and feed family while others sit along the roadside. The culture of the people in Ghana is really interesting especially when you get to the marketing sector, you experience different scene and me being a creative, I’m trying any means to tell the story about my country through images.”
